Major pipeline break puts area in Stage IV Alert

by Paul Treske

The water pipeline break which has profoundly affected water delivery through much of the East County area should be mostly repaired by early next week, according to Helix Water District manager, Bob Friedgen. In the meantime, Helix is continuing to "loan water" to both the Padre Dam and Otay Water Districts from reserves in Lake Jennings and El Capitan.

"We won't let our neighbors dry up without trying to meet the essential needs of all three districts," said Friedgen. The Helix manager explained that while Helix gets about two-thirds of its water from the 72" main from Lake Skinner (the one which ruptured last Friday), both Padre Dam and Otay receive virtually all of their water from that source. "Helix can turn to the reserves in the lakes," said Friedgen. "We haven't been using much of that water because of its taste being somewhat affected by algae," he added.

According to Friedgen, the problems with pipe repair are more intricate than they appear.

The main is deeply buried, with the bottom of the pipe 20 feet below ground level. In addition, due to terrain factors, there are no standard pipe shapes or lengths. Each section is literally a custom-crafted piece. As a result, in this case, damage evaluations seemed to indicate a need for three separate pipe lengths joined to effect repair. However, the Metropolitan Water District has the capacity to design, roll, fabricate and deliver custom piping within 48 hours. "It's better than the best warehouse," notes Friedgen.

In the meantime, Friedgen stressed that the Stage IV emergency will remain in affect until the problem is solved and urges strict conservation including no outdoor watering and limited use of dishwashers, washing machines and showers.

He praised the efforts made thus far but urged their continuance until the crisis is over. As noted in the green flyers being circulated throughout the district, "Water use must be cut 50 - 75 % until further notice."

The City of Lemon Grove, in its efforts to comply with the Stage IV Alert has discontinued irrigating all parks and landscaping and ceased washing all City vehicles and equipment.

Exceptional youths honored at City Council Meeting

By Lisa Parsons

Four Lemon Grove youths were honored for their volunteer service at last Monday's City Council meeting.

The youths were an integral part of the Lemon Grove Recreation Department's summer program, serving in the Leaders-In-Training program. The program recruits 13 to 15-year-olds and gives them a small taste of the "working world." They gain job skills by filling out job applications, being interviewed and taking part in staff training. Their training includes program planning, arts and crafts, sports and learning about the physical and social needs of younger children. Leaders-In-Training are assigned to one of the summer sites and work as staff under the guidance of the Recreation leaders and specialists. Their only payment is a T-shirt and attendance at the field trips.

The four youths honored at the Council meeting were each presented a plaque by Mayor Jim Dorman and commended for their efforts. Each of these Leaders-In-Training contributed over 100 volunteer hours and their names are: Sabrina Adams with 200+ hours, Adam Engelhart with 150+ hours, Steve Palm with 150+ hours and Bron Kenyatta with 100+ hours.

In other business, the Council scheduled two public hearings for November 5, 1990 at 7:30 p.m. The first hearing is to discuss a proposed amendment to the subdivision ordinance to define and establish procedures for processing and approval of vesting tentative maps and making other amendments required by the Subdivision Map Act or Municipal Code Editorial Policy. The second public hearing is to hear public testimony concerning an amendment to the zoning ordinance to provide for administrative approval of the first extension of time for expiring conditional use permits.

Also of note, Monday night's meeting marked City Clerk/Finance Director Karen Huff's 13th anniversary with the City of Lemon Grove.

Lemon Grove Assistant Superintendent Joe Farley, SDSU Block Leader Sticks Rowland, SDSU's Director of Teacher Education George Mehaffy, Lemon Grove School District Superintendent Jim Justeson and San Miguel Elementary School Principal Frank Patrick preside over the ribbon cutting for the San Diego State/Lemon Grove School District Teacher Education Cooperative.

SDSU and the LG School District work cooperatively to educate student teachers

Lemon Grove became the site of a mini-San Diego State University campus on Monday September 24 with the opening of the San Diego State University/Lemon Grove Teacher Education Cooperative at San Miguel Elementary School.

A trailer on the San Miguel campus will house 29 SDSU students currently enrolled in the university's teaching program. The innovative program requires that the professors come to the students instead of the students travelling back and forth between the SDSU campus and their student teaching jobs.

"I feel fortunate that we have the opportunity to have these excited and talented people on campus," said San Miguel Principal Frank Patrick. "This first month has been great!"

Representatives from SDSU were enthusiastic as well, "This opening celebrates the beginning of an extended amount of collaboration between San Diego State and the Lemon Grove School District, and illustrates a high level of cooperation," said SDSU's Director of Teacher Education, George Mehaffy.

Lemon Grove School District Superintendent Joe Farley said the on-site teaching program would be of great benefit to the district because, in the past, there were only five to seven school teachers in the district and today, they have 29. "We actively sought [this collaboration with SDSU] for two reasons," said Farley. "It gives us a form of help in screening and selecting new teachers, and the student teachers are a great help to the master teachers. They work cooperatively with them--almost team-teaching in the end."

The other important aspect of having the student teachers on-site is that they are in a classroom from the very first day of school. "In the past, student teachers came into the classroom several weeks after school started. This lead to the misconception that students knew how to line-up the first day and go to their groups, when really this took a lot of work and planning on the teacher's part," said Farley. "Having student teachers in the classroom on the first day gives them a better idea of how classroom procedures are established."

On-site student teaching programs have been tried on other campuses in the East County at the elementary and middle school levels.

Lemon Grove man named chef of new restaurant

Lemon Grove resident Brian P. Devine has joined The Waterfront Cafe and Club, Harbor Island's newest restaurant and night spot, as executive chef.

As executive chef, Devine is responsible for the complete management and supervision of food service and culinary production for the restaurant's high-volume operations.

"Brian's culinary experience as a catering and restaurant chef and consultant make him the perfect choice for executive chef of our new restaurant," said Federico Falco, operations manager for special projects for the Waterfront Cafe & Club.

"He will definitely be an asset and play a major role in the direction of the restaurant," Falco said.

Before joining the Waterfront, Devine worked for Golden Knives Culinary Services where he was catering and restaurant consultant.

While at Golden Knives Culinary Services, Devine was instrumental in the opening of many restaurants including Pacifica Del Mar, Rio's and others.

He also served as the co-producer, writer and on-air chef at cable channel 17 for the soon-to-be-aired "The Golden Knives Cooking Show. Devine was the production chef at Salvatore's Cucina Italiana in San Diego, and apprenticed under Chef Henri Bergmans of Torrey Club.

Devine and his wife, Erin, have two sons, Liam and Kieran.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

"A Farewell to Arms," "The Martian Chronicles," "Silas Marner," "Death of a Salesman" and the "American Heritage Dictionary" all have several things in common.

They are books... and they have all been banned from libraries somewhere in the United States during the past fifteen years!

The list is much longer, of course: "Brave New World," "Gone With the Wind," "The New American Poetry"...all books found threatening, profane, pornographic or objectionable by school boards, textbook committees or so-called "citizen groups."

During the past week, libraries throughout the County celebrated "Banned Books Week," mounting displays aimed at reminding us just how fragile our freedoms can become at times. There are shelves of books, most of whose titles are considered literary classics but which have been found unfit for our young people to read.

Van Tilburg's "The Ox Bow Incident" was considered "profane" by the Johnson City Illinois High School fathers in 1980, while, closer to home, "Gone With the Wind" was banned from Anaheim schools in 1978.

"The Diary of Anne Frank," hailed by half the world as one of the most remarkable statements of the human spirit ever penned, was rejected by members of the Alabama State Textbook Committee in 1983 because it was, in their words, "a real downer."

The list is lengthy; "The Grapes of Wrath," "A Doll's House," "The Spoon River Anthology."

All are books of ideas. They pulse with vitality and with questions. They are books which challenge us to think; to reevaluate what we have believed. And, as a result, they are to some, dangerous. Those people would shield us and our children from the unsettling thoughts such books might provoke.

The right to learn and think in a safe and open setting is basic to any free society. And the public or school library is one of the bastions upon which our free society stands.

Nations where children learn only what is allowed to be learned, quickly become dictatorships in which free access is only for those who govern.

The books displayed during "Banned Books Week" are neither pornographic or immoral. They are classics which have stood the tests of time and usage. Banned Books Week has been an effort to demonstrate the folly of restricting thought. One hopes that the message has been received.

From Where I Sit

by Frank Andrews

The morning air is crisp and clean, the sun is slowly rising in the East to make for a nice warm autumn day. All of the Lord's handiwork seems to come into focus during this most interesting time of the year.

A leisurely ride through an autumnal countryside can be most breathtaking and camera worthy.

The trees along the river resemble a colorful picture painted by the numbers; the oak, birch, elm, poplar, maple, ash, and elder all showing off their leaves in brilliant hues with just a touch of green from the all-season's pine.

The farmer's fields, lined with stacks of pale green alfalfa and golden grains, are dotted with bright orange pumpkins laying in wait for faces to be used for the upcoming Halloween. If you are lucky and observe very closely you might see or hear a bright colored, proud cock pheasant crowing in the underbrush.

Overhead "V" formations of Canadian geese and Northern ducks can be seen and heard slowly making their annual migration to southern climes for the winter. If your leisure-cruising is in the more remote areas you may even see a magnificent buck or doe grazing on some of the farmer's leftovers. It is hard to believe that in just a short time the hunting season will open and hordes of blood-thirsty hunters will kill or maim many of those beautiful creations of God.

It is difficult to dress during changeable autumn weather; cold crisp mornings, warm comfortable days, and then back to chilly evenings. In the late afternoons, the fresh air is flavored with the pungent aroma of burning leaves which have fallen from those gloriously colored trees and raked into piles.

The fall weekends are always bustling with outdoor activities; Friday night football, cheering on the local high school team, Saturday afternoon "Big 10" college football, and Sunday saved for that leisurely drive in the country and the final picnic of the year.

This most beautiful, exciting season of the year has the drab, unexciting name, "Autumnal Equinox." The ever-too-short three months period after summer always led to thoughts of the oncoming winter with below-zero temperatures and mucho snow, "I am a Fall Guy," from Minnesota.

I do miss the "changing seasons" but now prefer the mild unseasonal climate of California.

Sports Commentary

by John E. Wirges

Seasons Change - Outlook Still Poor

Change has come to the San Diego sports scene, but for the most part, waiting for success remains unchangeable. Promises still outweigh deeds on the diamond and gridiron.

On the football front, Dan Henning and his luckless Chargers go up against an even less fortunate group of lackluster behemoths Sunday when the San Diego squad invades Three River Stadium to take on the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Ah, talk about lack of thunder. The Steelers have been playing flatter than shim stock. The Steeler offense hasn't scored a touchdown in so long, quarterback Bubba Brister can't count up to six without using both hands. In fact, the Pittsburgh offense hasn't scored a touchdown since losing 26-23 to Denver in last year's playoffs.

What? Last year's Playoffs? This sorry collection of Pittsburgh grid-ders made the playoffs last year?

You bet. And the chargers haven't seen a post season coin toss since losing to Miami 34-13 on January 18, 1983.

If waiting the longest counts, the Chargers should shake off the cloak of incompetence that seems to be dogging their cleats thus far this season and escape Steeltown with a sweet victory.

Even after such a sorry beginning as the Chargers have had, chances are folks here will care more about a San Diego victory Sunday, than will the Steeltown fans.

Folks living where the Allegheny and the Monongahela form the Ohio are busy this fall cheering on the National League Eastern Division winning Pittsburgh Pirates.

The baseball Pittsburghers are fighting the Cincinnati Reds (who just gotta be the most popular American sporting team among fans in the Soviet Union) for the National League pennant. The winner will face the Oakland "A's" in the World Series, no matter who wins the American League Eastern Division crown.

The Padres were picked in most pre-season polls to be party to these post-season festivities. Their absence is cause for much displeasure among the new owners of the San Diego franchise.

Rumor (which could be fact between the writing and reading of these words) has Joe McIlvaine, a bona fide baseball man and a blue chip baseball executive, leaving the New York Mets to take command control of Padre operations.

McIlvaine is one of those old fashioned, dedicated, hard working, team player guys who does the nuts and bolts work that builds the success for which their bosses often take credit.

There are those who insist McIlvaine was the real talent behind Frank Cashen's rise to become the Met's executive vice president, general manager and chief operating officer.

Cashen must feel the same way. A story out of New York says Cashen felt "betrayed" by McIlvaine's appointment to the top Padre job. Cashen is casting hard stones at an honorable man who labored long and hard to help build the Mets powerhouse. Cashen does himself no honor in attacking McIlvaine's character.

A case in point: Joe McIlvaine refused to be interviewed by Padre officials while Jack McKeon was still on active duty. It was only after the job became vacant that he showed his interest.

That's class. A man like that is always welcome.

The Light Side of the Law

by Tom Tanana, J.D.

Would you believe that it's against the law to read your little boy a bedtime fable in California if you make him promise to go to sleep when you're done reading? You won't be telling stories, though, if you tell him October 11 marks Parson Weem's 231st birthday. He's best known for creating his own fable that George Washington cut down his Dad's cherry tree with a hatchet, and could not tell a lie.

San Francisco, California celebrates Modern Mythology Day October 13, as a public recognition of advertising characters as American cultural artifacts. But a minister can't advertise his church, or wedding services on a billboard in Elkton, Maryland.

If you want to advertise your own services in San Diego on your business building's outside wall, you're in for quite a dizzy loop, because it's not nearly as easy as you might think. First, your business sign can't cover more than 25 percent of your wall. But you can cover the whole wall if the wall is 75 square feet big. The sign can't be any higher than three feet, though, if your wall adjoins a sidewalk. Oops, it can't cover any more than 33 and one-third square feet if the speed limit on the street outside is 35 mph. If the speed limit is 30 mph, the sign has got to be no bigger than 16 and two-thirds square feet. So what if you've got a 75 square foot wall next to side walk in front of a 30 mph road?

Don't try advertising on tombstones in Roanoke Virginia, because it's prohibited by ordinance. And you can get cited for speeding if you go 20 mph in a San Diego cemetery! Another San Diego ordinance admonishes you that it's not a good idea to drive an ice cream truck through the cars in a funeral procession. At one time, you could get arrested if you ate too much at a funeral in Massachusetts! Try and keep mum about all of this if you decide to go to the Literally Haunted House in New Albany, Indiana, October 12 and 13. It's a real barn burner.

As the story goes, the Chicago fire was started 119 years ago on October 8, when Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lantern in the barn. Maybe that's why you can't tie a crocodile to a fire hydrant in Detroit, Michigan. Nor can you "hitch" a mule to a fire alarm box in Washington, D.C. Helena, Montana sort of combines them all together because you can't hitch a horse to a fire hydrant there! And you are forbidden from tying a horse to a hitching post in San Diego if that hitching post is four feet away from any plant, shrub or tree that you find growing in the freeway.

If you thought that hitching posts are still on London Bridge, or that London Bridge is still in London, you ought to mosey on over to Lake Havasu City, Arizona, where they're celebrating London Bridge Days October 8 through 13.

You're guilty of a misdemeanor in California, though, if you negligently dig up a bridge here.

Talk about water, Columbus Day is October 8, because that's the second Monday in October. But Columbus discovered America on October 12, 1492, when he waded ashore on a beach in the Bahamas-- which was never America anyway and in fact was a part of England until the '60s. But poor Chris's charting expeditions are a whole lot more complicated these days than they were in 1492. For starters, there's the federal bureaucracy to deal with. Title 33 of the US Code, in section 883a no less, says that calling things like this a mere charting expedition is passe. The new term is "topographical surveys."

Salmon days were celebrated in Issaquah, Washington, October 6 and 7, but it's illegal to use canned corn for bait in Oregon. And it's against the law to catch a whale in land-locked Oklahoma. Well, at least this would stay in keeping with Owensboro, Kentucky's National Possum Week, ending October 13, where people are exhorted to "always have as much fun as possum-able!"

But you still can't bring a fire-ant into California, on a little red wagon, unless you are a UCSD professor... in spite of the Fire Ant Festival in Marshall, Texas that's billed for October 13 and 14. They have a special chili cook-off there, where every chili pot must contain at least one fire ant as an ingredient!

National Frump Day is celebrated in Winter Park, Florida on October 14, the day after Margaret Thatcher turns 65. In spite of being the first woman prime minister in all of England's 700 years of parliamentary history, this falls in the middle of St. Louis, Missouri's National Cosmetology Month. Their theme slightly misses the point that you don't have to be beautiful to be useful to society. "A New You. What better time than Now!" beckons Missouri cosmetologists.

But still, no one has rescinded Chicago's "ugly ordinance." No one who walks about the Chicago streets may legally "be an unsightly or disgusting object," or else he/she can get slapped with a $50 fine.

This column is just a light look at the law, and is not intended as legal advice. You may write to Tom Tanana, J.D. at P.O. Box 177110, San Diego, CA 92177.

KIDZARTZ Festival in Balboa Park offers participatory fun

Wondrous things happen when kids discover the arts. A ballet dancer can fly on her toes. A violinist can coax his strings to sing. A sculptor can transform clay to figures. A painter can stroke colors to life. An opera singer can send a voice to the tree-tops.

The free fourth annual KIDZARTZ Festival is making these things happen on Saturday and Sunday, October 13 and 14, from 10:30 to 5 p.m. throughout Balboa Park.

Thousands of school children (grades K through 9) will experience theater, literature, art, music, dance, puppetry, poetry and mime in more than 35 different performances and workshops led by professional visual artists and performers.

In celebration of the arts, children will conduct musicians of the San Diego Symphony with conductor Matthew Garbutt; sculpt clay figures with artist Jim Hubbell; make African masks with Brenda De Flanders; paint with artist Juli Vee (of San Diego Sockers fame), among other offerings.

The American ballet ensemble will create a fanciful fable, dancing "Peter and the Wolf," in both Spanish and English.

There will be a "Musical Petting Zoo," featuring 50 real musical instruments to learn about, touch and play.

Artists Eddie Edwards and Jean Cornwell will offer mural painting, and Dance instructors Susan Wingfield and Betzi Roe will teach body movement.

Also, there will be an "Architectural Playground" with local artists and architects who will help with maze-making and building tasks.

KIDZARTZ is co-sponsored by San Diego City Schools and the Ilan Lael Foundation and underwritten by the City of San Diego and various area businesses.

For further information about the event, call 456-8424.

With solid backing, Community Band getting set for second season

After completing a highly successful first season, the La Mesa Community Band is readying to present a second year of light classical and pop selections.

The Band holds rehearsals on Thursdays at the Grossmont Union High School band room, located at 1100 Murray Dr. in La Mesa.

Musicians of all ages are encouraged to attend rehearsals. There are no fees for becoming a band member; musicians can simply show up with their instruments and start playing.

"Even though many people think the La Mesa Community Band is for kids and young adults, older musicians may want to consider dusting off their instruments and hopping on our bandwagon," said Band co-conductor, Chuck Yates.

"We are especially encouraging adult musicians to join the band this year. We would love to see more adults get involved."

In its first year, the La Mesa Community Band swelled to over 100 members, attracting musicians from throughout San Diego County. The Band closed out its first season with a very successful outdoor summer concert series.

Plans have already been set for next season, with its first performance entitled, "A Holiday Celebration." The show, featuring Christmas season favorites, will be held on December 16th at 7 p.m.

TA GATTSHALL in the Superior Court of California, County of SAN DIEGO
THE PETITION requests that JUANI-TA GATTSHALL be appointed as personal representative to administer the Helix loses a tough one

By Paul Treske

Put a pair of granite-like defenses across from each other on the gridiron and you expect a bruising, low-scoring game.

Form ran true last Thursday night as Point Loma edged Helix 10 to 7 in a game between the two top-five rated teams.

Tied 7 to 7 at the half, each team had a single second half scoring opportunity. The Pointers cashed in with Bobby Oliviera's 27 yard field goal, with five minutes left, while an earlier Helix drive stalled on an interception inside the Pointers five. On that drive, the Highlanders had moved to the Pointer's six, but a disastrous delay-of-game penalty moved them back, ultimately leading to the interception.

Helix's defense proved tough throughout, but the offense found itself plagued with penalties on the several occasions it seemed ready to drive.

The Highlander's next game will be on October 5 with cross-town rival Grossmont.

Lemon Grove weekend community festivals provide fun and entertainment

By Lindy Magner

A tradition for twenty years, the St. John of the Cross annual "Turn of the Century Festival" was held over the weekend, bringing members of the congregation and the community together over plates of ethnic food and booths of arts and crafts.

"There is a great history behind this event. In the old days, this celebration was called the Rodeo, people like Roy Rogers and his horse Trigger and other celebrities would come and perform. That's how they raised money to build this church," said Monsignor Raymond C. Kirk.

"Today, the Festival is a community-builder, we have a very ethnic congregation, as you can tell from the food booths, this gets everyone working together as a group," he added.

Food included the "Polynesian Inn" booth lined with pineapples for decoration and serving up Saimin and kabobs, a Mexican food booth and others.

Friday evening the Festival opened in the evening with indoor Bingo and outdoor music. For Saturday and Sunday, various performances including dancers, musicians and a magician were slated in both day and evening hours.

Booths included face-painting for the kids, bake goods, hand-painted T-shirts and various crafts.

On the other side of town, Lemon Grove Congregational United Church of Christ was holding a similar celebration.

"This is the third year we've done this, and this year is better than years before," said Rev. Joan Pettis, who explained that this year's festival was not a carbon copy of other years, but featured first-time offerings.

For example, a bicycle inspection station was set up to check the safety of children's bikes, a public service Pettis plans to offer at the next festivals.

"This really brought them out

At the Community Festival many bikes were inspected and paraded.

in the morning, a lot of people showed for this," said Pettis. Nearly ninety bikes passed through the inspection center after which bikes decked-out in crepe paper and balloons, participated in a bike "parade."

Each child who passed through the inspection line received a free Tony Gwynn poster, as well as the gift of gab of Dick Smith, one of five church members who were bike inspector-for-a-day.

"The front wheel bearings look okay, you got a bent reflector on the back, is it all right if I fix that?" he said with ease as he passed bike after bike through the inspection which looked for safety problems.

The "parade of bikes" was judged for best bike decorations. Best bikes were chosen in three age groups, with the following winners: six and under, Adrienne Hernandez, 7 to 10, Hanna Mitchell, 11 and up, Nate Stein.

Dancing entertainment was offered for the first time by Joni Baker Dance Studio.
